"A frightful catastrophe, indeed, and a terrible one! I do not wonder at your sadness. But, young gentlemen, do not take it so to heart. It is the fate of war, and war is always frightful."

"Did you find out the name of the ship, boatswain?" asked General Greene.

"Yes, your honor—the Radnor, thirty-six."

"Could no one have been saved?" queried General Knox.

"No one, sir. No boat could have lived in that sea a moment. We could not put back, could do no good if we had, and so we came on to Philadelphia, and that's all."

"No, general," cried Seymour; "it's not all! We will tell the general the whole story, Talbot. You remember, sir, the raid on the Wilton place and the capture of the colonel and his daughter?" The general nodded.

"Well, sir, before the Ranger sailed I received a note from Miss Wilton saying they were to be sent to England in the Radnor."

"You received the note? I thought she was Mr. Talbot's betrothed, Mr. Seymour."

"I thought so, too, general, but it seems that we are both wrong. Lieutenant Seymour captured her during his visit there with Colonel Wilton," said Talbot, with a faint smile.

"I am very sorry for you, Talbot, and you are a fortunate man, Mr. Seymour. But go on. We are all friends here. Did you say they were to go in the Radnor?"

"Yes, sir. The pursuing frigate was recognized by one of my men, who had been pressed and fogged while on her, as the Radnor, the ship on which they were. I heard the man say so just as we neared the reef. To go through the pass was to lead the English ship to destruction and cause the death of those we-of the colonel, sir," continued Seymour in some confusion.

"To refrain from attempting the pass was to lose the ship and all it meant for our cause. I could not decide, I say frankly I could not condemn those I—our friends to death, and I could not lose the ship either. This old man knew it all. He has known me from a child. He spoke out boldly and laid my duty before me and pleaded with me."

"He did not need it, your honor. No, sir; he would have done it anyway," interrupted Bentley.

The general took the hand of the embarrassed old boatswain and shook it warmly; then, fixing his glowing eyes upon the two young men, said:

"Continue, Mr. Seymour."

"I know not what I might have done, but the old seaman's appeal to my honor decided me. I went aft with horror in my heart, but resolved to do my duty. On my way there I took out of my pocket the little note received from Miss Wilton. A gust of wind blew it to the hand of Mr. Talbot. It was only a line. As he picked it up it flew involuntarily. We had some words. I drew on him, sir. It was my fault."

"No, no, general: the fault was mine!" interrupted Talbot. "I said it was my letter, refused to give it up, insulted him. He would have arrested me. Bentley and Philip interfered. I taunted him, advanced to strike him. He had to draw or be dishonored."

"Nay, general, but the fault was mine. I was the captain of the ship. The safety of the ship depended on me."

"Go on, go on, Mr. Seymour," said Talbot. "This dispute does honor to you both."

"The rest happened as has been told you. One of the splinters struck Mr. Talbot's sword and swept it into the sea. The note went with it, and then the frigate was wrecked and Colonel Wilton and his daughter, with all the rest, lost."

It was very still in the room. "My poor friend, my poor friend," murmured the general, "and that charming girl! Without a moment's warning! Young gentlemen, taking each of the young men by the hand, "I honor you. You have deserved well of our country for the frankness with which one of you admits his fault, for it was a fault, and takes the blame upon himself, and for the heroic resolution by which the other sacrifices his love for his duty. Laurens, make out a captain's commission for Mr. Talbot. Hamilton, I wish you would write out a general order declaring the capture of the transport and her landing and the sinking of the Juno and the wreck of the English frigate. It will hearten the men for our enterprise tonight. As for you, Mr. Seymour, I shall use what little influence I may be able to exert to get you a ship at once. Meantime, as we contemplate attacking the enemy at last, I shall be glad to offer you a position as volunteer on my staff for a few days if your duties will permit. And to you, Philip, let me be a father indeed—my poor boy! As for you, boatswain, what can I do for you?"

"Nothing, your honor; nothing, sir. You have shaken me by the hand, and that's enough." The old man hesitated, and then, seeing only kindness in the general's face, for the old sailor attracted and pleased him, he went on softly: "Aye, love's a mighty thing, your honor. We know it, we old men. And love of woman's strong, they say, but these boys have shown us that something else is stronger."

"And what is that, pray, my friend?" "Love of country, sir," said Bentley in the silence.

CHAPTER XXII.

AT an hour later, after the four travelers had taken some refreshment, hasty steps were heard outside the door, followed by the sentry's hail.

"Ah," said the general, looking up eagerly from the book he had been reading, "perhaps that is Mr. Martin with news from the enemy?" Then, laying aside his book, he rose to his feet to meet the newcomer, who proved to be the man he had expected. The young man stood at attention and saluted, while the general addressed him sharply:

"Well, sir, what have you learned?" The young officer appeared extremely embarrassed. "I—well, the fact is, sir, nothing at all," he stammered.

"Nothing," said the general loudly, with rising heat; "nothing, sir! Did you not cross the river as I directed you?"

"No, sir—that is, I tried to, but there was so much floating ice and it was so difficult to manage a boat that I thought it would be hardly worth while to attempt it, sir. In fact, the crossing is impracticable for troops," he went on more confidently, but his face changed as he looked up at his infuriated superior. The general was a picture of wrath, the lines in his forehead standing out plainly, his mouth shut more tightly and grimly than ever. It was evident that he was furiously angry, and his face had in it something terrible from his rage. The young officer stood before him now, white and frightened to death.

"I saw him this way at Kip's Landing," whispered Hamilton to Seymour. "Look! He has lost control of himself completely. There will be an explosion sure."

The general struggled for a moment and then broke away. "Impracticable, sir, impracticable!" he roared out in a voice of thunder. "How dare you say what this army can or cannot do? And what do you mean by not crossing the river and ascertaining the facts I desire to know?" The next moment he stepped forward and, seizing a heavy leaden inkstand from the table near him, threw it with all his force full at the man, crying fiercely:

"Be off and send me a man!"

The officer dodged the missile, which struck the wall with a crash, saluted and ran out of the door as if his life depended on it, feeling in his heart that he would face any danger rather than brave another storm of wrath like that he had just sustained. The general continued to pace up and down the room restlessly for a few moments until he recovered his composure.

"I depended upon that information, and I must have it," he soliloquized. "If that man does not bring it back to us before we cross the river I'll have him cashiered. Shall I send another man? No; I'll give him another chance."

Seymour picked up the book the general had been reading. It was the Bible, and open at the twenty-second chapter of the book of Joshua. His eye fell upon the twenty-second verse, which was marked. "The Lord God of gods, the Lord God of gods, he knoweth, and Israel he shall know; if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the Lord (save us not this day)."

Just then the little daughter of Keith, the owner of the farmhouse at which they were staying, entered the room. As the little miss came up fearlessly to the general he stopped and smiled down at her.

"Father and mother wish to know if you will want supper tonight, sir?" "No, my little maid," he replied. "Not here, at any rate. And which do you like the better now, the redcoats or the Continentals?"

"The redcoats, sir; they have such pretty clothes," said the nascent woman.

"Ah, my dear," he replied blithely, catching her up in his arms and kissing her the while, "they look better, but they don't fight. The ragged fellows are the boys for fighting."

"Singular man!" mused Seymour, contrasting the outbreak of wrath at the recalcitrant officer, the open Bible he had been reading and the last merry, tender greeting to the child. But his musings were interrupted by the general himself speaking.

"General Greene, you would better ride over to the landing and place the different brigades. Take Hamilton with you, and perhaps General Knox will go also to look out for the artillery. The brigades were to start at 8 o'clock for McConkey's Ford, and the nearest of them should be there now. We shall move in two divisions after we leave Birmingham on the other side. I wish you to command the first one, which will comprise the brigades of Sterling, Mercer and De Fernoy, with Hand's riflemen and Haugeg's Germans and Forest's battery. I shall accompany your column. General Sullivan will take the second division, with Sargent's and St. Clair's brigades and Glover's Marblehead men and Stark's New Hampshire riflemen. The two columns will divide at Birmingham. You will take the east or inland road, and Sullivan that by the river. Have you that order I spoke of for the troops, Mr. Hamilton? If so, you will give a copy of it to General Greene, who will publish it to the troops as soon as they arrive. Captain Morris, I think you would better go also. You will muster your troop. The men will have returned from carrying my orders to the different brigades and can be assembled once more. I desire you to attend my person tonight as our only cavalry. Talbot, you would better get with General Greene; you also, marquis, so that you can be with your friend Captain Hamilton. The rest of us will follow you shortly."

"How dare you say what this army can or cannot do?"

The officers designated bowed and in a few moments were on the road. The officers left at the headquarters were speedily busy with their necessary duties, and Seymour and his two companions, one of whom, the boatswain, was most unfamiliar with and uncomfortable upon a horse, were able to get a couple of hours of needed rest before starting out upon what they felt would be an arduous journey. About half after 6 o'clock the signal to mount was given, and the whole party, led by the general himself and followed by the ragged guard, was soon upon the road.

It was intensely cold, and the night bade fair to be the severest of the winter. The sky was cloudless, however, and there was a bright moon.

REPUBLICANS WELCOME IT

Revival of Cleveland Talk Gives Joy to G. O. P. Leaders.

Indianapolis, July 2.—If there is one thing which has pleased Republican leaders in this city more than anything else in the last day or two it is the revival of talk about Grover Cleveland for the Democratic presidential nomination which has been started so vigorously since the advance guard of the delegates and managers has arrived on the ground at St. Louis. If there is any candidate Indiana Republicans would like to see the Democrats nominate it is the old-time leader. With Cleveland as the candidate of the Democrats they say there would be nothing to do in this state this fall but to count the Republican majority. Now that the Democrats are really getting together the chances of a Cleveland boom which may give that gentleman the nomination are regarded as exceedingly good. That the party should turn back to the only man who has been able to win, in case of a hard fight, if the Eastern delegates are able to manage affairs, is regarded as extremely likely. So far as this state is concerned Republicans say the Cleveland nomination would give them the victory without a struggle. Democrats have paved the way for this by declaring that Cleveland could not carry a county in the state. While Republicans do not take as cheerful a view of it as this, they are just as cheering for the party to make Cleveland the standard bearer.

In connection with the interest aroused by the great conventions of the other parties, one little event which happened at the prohibition convention in this city has caused politicians generally to have more respect for that party, as it showed that even the cold water delegation can grow politicians. The man who is receiving the tribute of the politicians is Oliver W. Stewart. Stewart's little coup by which he defeated the nomination of General Miles is regarded as a piece of "slick" politics. When the Miles boom assumed threatening proportions, Stewart, realizing that he was the only man who could defeat the military man on the floor of the convention, had himself put forward. While Miles remained a possibility Stewart managed to dominate affairs so that he was in every delegate's mind. When Miles sent his telegram withdrawing, the necessity for Stewart remaining in the field was gone and he promptly got out of the way himself and held onto the fat office of national chairman, which pays him $3,000 a year.

Monday will see one of the largest lodge gatherings in this city that the town has ever witnessed. This is in the great celebration of the Pathfinders. This is a comparatively new lodge, but the rapid manner in which it has grown in the last few months even, it might almost be said, has marked it as a coming power in the fraternal world. Now the Pathfinders propose to demonstrate their force, and they have planned a great demonstration to be held here on July 4. It is the purpose to inflame the largest class which ever took the first degree in any lodge at one time at this great gathering. So many of the lodge members have been taken in during the last few months that the initiates number almost 1,000. It is proposed to take them all in at once. This of course will be the great event of the gathering. A street parade and pageant is promised and the program of speeches and musical numbers will be much above the average.

Indianapolis will be treated to the greatest series of horse races in its history next week, and the fact that some of the greatest running horses in the country will participate in the contests for the rich purses has aroused more interest among horsemen.

Martinsville, Ind., July 2.—Arrangements have been completed for a meeting of Seventh-Day Adventists in this city to begin Aug. 18. From 500 to 600 people will be present.

CLEVELAND'S BOOM

Talk of the Ex-President's Chances at St. Louis Is Growing.

MAY BE A STAMPEDE

Eastern Interests Are Said to Be Centering On the Sage of Princeton and Parker Is Anxious.Chairman Jones Says John Sharpe Williams Will Probably Be Temporary Chairman.

St. Louis, July 2.—Former Senator James K. Jones, chairman of the national Democratic committee, arrived in the city and took apartments in the Jefferson hotel. He said that no definite arrangements for the organization of the convention had yet been made, and predicted that none would be made until the meeting of the full national committee, which will take place next Monday. He, however, advocates the selection of Hon. John Sharpe Williams of Mississippi, leader of the minority in the house, for the position of temporary chairman, and there is now little or no doubt that the selection will fall upon Mr. Williams.

The permanent chairmanship will probably go to some Northern delegate and Hon. Thomas E. Barkworth of Michigan and Hon. Patrick A. Collins of Massachusetts are mentioned in that connection. The double committee on arrangements for the convention will hold a meeting today, but it is not expected that it will make any recommendation with regard to convention officers. The national committee will also take up and dispose of contests on the part of several delegates. The most prominent of these is the Illinois case, and Delegate Hopkins, who holds credentials as delegate-at-large, is in the city busily occupied in presenting claims.

Cleveland Boom Revived.

Practically the only feature of political interest associated with the approaching convention discussed in the hotel corridors is the possibility of an attempt to stampede the convention to ex-President Cleveland. There was a decided effort on the part of some of the friends of other candidates to pooh-pooh the suggestion, but others of them, while expressing their confidence that it would come to naught, frankly admitted the existence of the boom, and set themselves to work to counteract its effect.

The movement in the interest of Mr. Cleveland, so far as it has taken shape, is directed against the candidacy of Judge Parker, and for the time being they are talked of as if they were the only possible candidates. So far no headquarters have been established in Cleveland's interest, and no delegates who express a preference for him have arrived, but each train coming in from the states east of the Mississippi seem to bring passengers who regard the ex-president as a formidable possibility. This circumstance has led to the conclusion that a systematic campaign has been organized in New York or Washington.

The friends of Judge Parker met the situation boldly, and apparently were welcoming it. They freely express the opinion that the serious discussion of Mr. Cleveland's name in connection with the presidency will have the effect of driving many delegates to their candidate, thus insuring a larger vote for him on the early ballots than they had otherwise counted upon. They expect many such gains from the West and South, and notwithstanding he has only about a fourth of the total vote pledged, hope to make such a showing at the very beginning of the balloting as will convince his followers that he is a winner, and thus prevent a stampede to Mr. Cleveland or anyone else.

Some of the talk in Cleveland's behalf comes from the Southern states, and the Parker advocates attribute it to the declaration of the Chicago platform on the race question, which they say have inspired such fear among Southern Democrats that they are willing to accept Mr. Cleveland because of their confidence that he would stand with them on that point regardless of his views on other questions. The Parker men say, however, that he is no stauncher supporter of the policy of the rule of the white man in the South than other candidates, and they also argue that his chances of election are no better than those of other candidates. It is quite freely admitted, however, that if Judge Parker should fall early to secure the necessary vote his chances would be materially injured.

"It," said a prominent Southern senator, "he fails to get the two-thirds vote requisite by the time the third or fourth ballot is reached he will be compelled to retire. In that event," he added, "the nomination will go to a dark horse, and a very dark horse." Among the dark horses most frequently spoken of are Senator Gorman and Joseph Folk.

Taggart's Opinion Expressed.

"Nothing in it," said Hon. Thomas Taggart of Indiana, when upon his arrival last night he was asked to express an opinion relative to the possibility of the nomination of ex-President Cleveland. "Nothing in it," he repeated with emphasis, and added:

"Parker will be nominated on the first ballot, or at the latest, on the second." He also expressed the opinion that the Kansas City platform would not be reaffirmed.

A number of Mr. Hearst's supporters held a conference last night at the Jefferson which did not conclude until near midnight. They went over the situation thoroughly, and after the meeting it was stated that the outlook had been found to be very encouraging. It was stated that there are enough votes of which Mr. Hearst is sure to prevent the nomination of any other candidate.

JUNE WEATHER AND CROPS.

Very Remarkable Growth of Vegetation—Month Wet and Cool.

June 1904, was cool, wet and very dark. The average daily deficit in temperature was two degrees, the sunshine was about half an average, and the excess of rain fall was one-half an inch. The warmest day was the 24th with a maximum of 90 degrees, and the coolest was the 13th with a minimum of 47 degrees. The greatest daily range was 32 degrees, and the monthly comparative range was 43 degrees. Electrical storms occurred on the 4th, 5th, 14th, 15th, 19th, 21st, 24th, 25th, 26th, 29th and 30th. There were dense fogs on the 8th and 20th and hail fell on the 15th and 29th. The winds were southwesterly, and usually light, but a destructive "blow," of sixty miles an hour was noted on the evening of the 29th. Rain fell on twelve days. Nine days were clear. Sixteen were partially cloudy, and five were cloudy. The total precipitation was 4.78 inches; and the greatest rainfall in 24 hours was .95 of an inch on the 29th.

The growth of all vegetation was wonderful, and the backwardness of the early season was "made up." Wheat harvest was about completed and the crop was a fair average in quantity and quality. All field and garden crops were in very promising condition. Fruits were abundant and good, save peaches, and berries were unusually fine crop. Grapes promise well. General crop outlook much improved. Temperatures: Maximum, 90 degrees on the 24th, minimum, 47 degrees on the 13th; monthly mean was 71 degrees above zero.

Mrs. Thos. Kershner R. F. D. No. 1 says: Had it not been for the lenses fitted by Mr. and Mrs. Harsch last November while at the New Lynn Hotel, our 13 year old boy Guy could not have kept up his studies at school. He complained of severe pains around and over the eyes. In the morning they wanted to stick together, the lids and eyeballs were both very red and inflamed and his school teacher suggested that we should have his eyes examined. Since wearing the lenses prescribed by Mr. and Mrs. Harsch, the boy's eyes are entirely well and all of the trouble has passed away and this was accomplished without a drop of medicine. We heartily recommend these people to any who have eye-sight troubles appreciating what has been done for our child.

We make free examination and guarantee result or your money back. Mr. and Mrs. Harsch, Optometrists.

A Summer Day Dream.

A June time morning gladdens me. A bright morn from the years ago. Returned at last. Though years have passed, We meet again, we speak, we know. I hear the same lark sing that sung. In this same morn of years ago. Above her nest, With dewy breast, The very same, her notes I know. The same ripe grain in the field, The golden waves of years ago. And they who gleam, Long since I've seen, Their sickle sharpening well, I know. The same bees haunt the clover bloom, The same red bloom of years ago; In wild-wood shade, And in the glade, The same birds sweetly sing, I know. The same old June-time apple tree, The first to ripen years ago; Deep in the shade, The orchard made, The apples are the same, I know. The same glad waters from the spring, Passed by me laughing years ago, The same bright flowers, Perfume the hours. Their names and language well I know. She shares with me this happy morn, Who was my sweetheart years ago. Today the same, Though changed her name, 'Tis all the change I see or know.

EVERETT CARTER, West Baden, Ind., June 28, 1904.

Baptist Meeting.

The meeting in the Baptist church, last night, proved another rich treat. The attendance was good and the sermon worthy of it. Also Mr. Leigh's solo at the close of the meeting was the kind to move hearts. The singer regretted Mr. Lamoreux's absence, but the Franklin man could scarcely have done it better.

Tomorrow Mr. Leigh will conduct both services. The communion of the Lord's supper will follow the morning service. The general public, especially those who are not habitual church-goers are cordially invited to attend, particularly the evening service. The meetings will continue every evening next week.

Increase of Eleven Cents.

An increase of eleven cents for each school pupil in Indiana is shown in the summary of the reports compiled by the state board of education. In the report of last January the appropriation of money per capita was shown to be $1.41, while in the report sent to the printers today it is shown to be $1.52. In this the increase of the number of pupils in the state is considered, although it is not very large. The amount received from counties is $1,191,151.90. The amount in the treasury was $1,431.30 and the amount apportioned was $1,168,370.80. The balance now in the treasury is $24,112.40.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

"Peru-na is the Medicine for the Poor Man."

Mr. Geo. A. Hughes, 808 Mass. Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "Peru-na has done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I am forty-five years old now, and feel as good as I did at 20. I was very thin and run down, but Peru-na acted just right in my case. I am a carpenter and sometimes need a tonic. Peru-na is the medicine for a poor man."—Geo. A. Hughes.

A Congressman Uses Peru-na in His Family.

Hon. Thos. J. Henderson, Member of Congress from Illinois, and Lieutenant in the Union Army for eight years, writes from the Lemon building, Washington, D. C., as follows:

"Peru-na has been used in my family with the very best results and I take pleasure in recommending your valuable remedy to my friends as a tonic and an effective cure for catarrh."—Thos. J. Henderson.

Catarrh assumes different phases in different seasons of the year. In the early summer systemic catarrh is most prevalent. That tired, all worn out feeling in nine cases out of ten is due to a catarrhal condition of the mucous membranes. Peru-na cleanses the mucous membranes and cures the catarrh wherever located.

There are no remedies for catarrh just as good as Peru-na. Accept no substitutes. If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

pushed northward to a point where Kuropatkin established his base after the battle of Vafangou. So far as the Russians know Kuroki is steadily pushing onward through all the mountain passes, even toward Mukden.

Preparations at all points are now practically complete. The demonstrations made during the last few days against the Russian left flank threaten to completely change the position of the two armies.

Notwithstanding four days' rain the troops are still being moved. Some red cross trains with wounded passed northward June 30. The newspaper correspondents have returned to Liao

Yang from the south. A press bureau has been established here.

RAIN HAMBERS TROOPS

Campaign in Upper Manchuria May Be

Delayed Awhile.

St. Petersburg, July 2.—It is believed here that the commencement of the rainy season will materially affect the whole military situation. The authorities consider that it greatly lessens the probability of an immediate decisive engagement between Generals

Kuropatkin and Kuroki, and it is thought that it will close the campaign in the upper part of the Liao Tung peninsula until good weather sets in.

The Japanese will probably be forced to hold the positions where the rain finds them, as best they can.

The operations around Port Arthur doubtless will be seriously hampered.

It is believed that the Japanese will find it necessary to establish another base, probably on the west coast of the lower part of the Liao Tung peninsula.

In order to bring in food supplies, especially, if the 10,000 troops reported to have been landed on the Elliott

Islands be sent toward Port Arthur.

The Japanese will probably be able to utilize the time in making preparations to push the siege on the resumption of fair weather.
